Gilberto C. Gallopin

Gilberto C. Gallopín, is currently independent researcher residing in Buenos Aires, Argentina. He received his Ph.D. in Ecology from Cornell University in 1969 and is an ecological systems analyst and sustainable development expert.

He has worked on ecological systems analysis, food chain and niche theory, global and environmental modeling, environmental impact assessment, environmental and land use prospective, the environment and development nexus, environment and quality of life, impoverishment and sustainable development, scenario analysis, and policy dialogues.

Gilberto C. Gallopin has published more than 100 papers in these areas. He is the editor of a book on ecological perspectives for Latin America, principal author of a book on problems and opportunities for sustainable development in Latin America and of a booklet on global scenarios and human choice, and co-author of the Latin American World Model and of a book on adaptive environmental impact assessment and management. Among other papers, he authored Global Sustainability. Bending the Curve, 2002; Environmental and Sustainability Indicators and the Concept of Situational Indicators. A Systems Approach, 1996; and Impoverishment and Sustainable Development. A Systems Approach, 1994.

Among other positions, he was the Regional Advisor for Environmental Policy in the Division for Sustainable Development and Human Settlements of the Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean (ECLAC); Director of "Systems for Sustainable Development" Program in the Stockholm Environment Institute (SEI), Stockholm, Sweden; Leader of Land Management Program at the International Center for Tropical Agriculture (CIAT), based in Cali, Colombia; Senior Fellow at the International Institute for Sustainable Development (IISD), Winnipeg, Canada; Senior Expert on Environment and Development "at the International Institute for Applied Systems Analysis (IIASA), Austria; Full Professor at both the University of Buenos Aires and the Bariloche Foundation in Argentina, as well as Executive Chairman and Chairman of the Board of Bariloche Foundation.

Gilberto C. Gallopin is one of the founding members of the "New World Dialogue on Environment and Development" and "Inter-American Group for the Sustainable Development of Agriculture and Natural Resources." Until early 1991 he directed the Systems Analysis Ecological Group (Argentina).

March 2014